A CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT

With this issue the management and editorship of The Morehead Independent changes hands, Mr. W. J. Sample having sold the newspaper and plant.

Although The Independent was started two years before Mr. Sample purchased it, the growth of the paper to the place where it has become a vital community asset can be attributed to Mr. Sample's efforts.

The plant was located on Railroad Street when Mr. Sample took over. After the disastrous 1939 flood he constructed the modern building on the corner of Sun Street and Wilson Avenue. Both the Independent and the Rowan County News will be published from this plant in the future.

Mr. Sample has done away with all the equipment used when he purchased the paper and has installed modern machinery. The paper has increased since that time in advertising, literature, reader interest and circulation.

Besides operating The Independent, Mr. Sample has taken a very active interest in all community and civic enterprises. He has promoted and assisted in many ways of the enterprises that have meant advancement for Morehead.

The Independent has been operated as a clean, journalistic newspaper. Despite the war, with its many handicaps, the paper has continued to be published even though, at times skilled, mechanical help has been almost impossible to procure.

Mr. Sample will remain in Morehead as our friend and neighbor. He can count practically every person in Rowan County as his friend. He knows most of the citizens of this county personally.

Coming here in 1925 Mr. Sample attended The Morehead State Teachers College for four years where he was very active in student and campus affairs.

He then went to Lexington where he worked for The Lexington Herald in the advertising department. In 1936 he purchased The Independent which he has successfully operated since.

Morehead is fortunate in having Bill Sample as one of its citizens. Although he is now out of the newspaper business, we can depend on it that he will remain as one of our good citizens and community leaders.

two or more grasses and two or more legumes. This land will only be plowed when it is necessary to re-establish more meadow.

All steep cleared land will be maintained in permanent pasture. All fields were checked for need of limestone and phosphate and a schedule set for liming and phosphating. Corn will only be grown where it is necessary to cultivate a field before re-establishing meadow or pasture. All fields above two percent slope will be plowed, planted, and cultivated on the contour. Some re-arrangement of fences will be made in order to use the land to a better advantage. Pastures will be mowed during June and July to control weeds and bushes. Rotational grazing will be practiced and galled spots will be mulched and reseeded. Woodland will be protected from fire and grazing by livestock. Two acres of Sericea Lespedeza will be planted as a demonstration for its use as hay or pasture.

Mr. Perkins believes that by applying these simple practices on his farm he can do a better job of farming.

The Rowan County Soil Conservation District had eleven new co-operators on which a conservation plan was worked out during November, totaling 1,773 acres.

Breaks the News Daily
Informing listeners in six states of world happenings

JOHN CONNELLY . . . WHAS' News Reporter, heard every week day at 5:15 and 10:00 P.M., is a man with an immense following. His rich baritone voice carries authority, avoids the pitfalls of prejudice and bias, in strict compliance with the requirements of a free press and radio.

Five news service teletypes, ready-to-read wires, and a CBS book of "War Words" makes for authentic reporting, yet few men reach the news mile without five years' apprenticeship on 50,000-watt stations. John, young, blonde and handsome, set his course to radio news while still in Northwestern University, following up with voice training in Chicago. He was soon handling political broadcasts from Illinois' state capital.

Seven years' association with radio news, two of which have been with WHAS. John has witnessed release of world-shaking news . . . Pearl Harbor, the Allied invasion, and his recent reporting of election returns throughout the night, are but three examples.

A news veteran of but twenty-seven years, John is married and, when not at the station, pursues his hobby of building model bombers.
